

POLICE TAKE UP AUTO BELIEVED TO BE BANDIT'S

A mysterious Ford auto found standing on a side street just off Nuuanu late last night is believed by the police to be the automobile used by Korean robbers who recently tried to enter a Japanese school and the Azuma tea house. In an effort to ascertain the identity of the car, a reporter from the Nippon Jiji, a Japanese newspaper, and a boy from school were called to headquarters this afternoon. They are said to have seen the car pass several nights ago with a load of Koreans.

The car bears the number 1617, and is registered in the name of W. A. Rathburn, Kahuku. It carries a strong electric light on the side, and one of the characteristics of the bandit's auto is the same kind of light.

Previous to finding this machine, two reports came in of an automobile in which were several Koreans sitting along Fort street and Nuuanu street late last night.

The police hope to trace the Korean robbers through this machine if it proves to be the one used in the raids.

JAMES E. BOYLE IS FINED $250 FOR GAMBLING

Pleads Guilty to Charge; Judge Monsarrat Says Public Opinion Makes Law

In line with previous fines of $250 and $300 imposed on men who were players in the game of poker raided in room 10, New Allington hotel, the night of November 17, Judge Monsarrat this morning imposed a fine of $250 on James E. Boyle, after hearing the evidence of two out of six witnesses which the prosecution had on hand.

Boyle pleaded guilty as he announced some days ago he would do, but when Prosecuting Attorney Charles P. Chillingworth asked for a fine of $250 his attorney, R. J. O'Brien, entered strenuous objection. Mr. O'Brien said the charge against Boyle was only playing in a game and he should not be punished as heavily as Corbett or Johnson, who had testified they conducted the game.

"Neither Corbett or Johnson ever testified that they conducted the game," Chillingworth said. "Neither of them ever took the witness stand. They pleaded guilty to playing in a game of poker, and as there were marked cards, automatic guns and such things in the room, they were heavily fined."

Modified First Charge.
"I do not see why Boyle should be let off easier than the others. We asked that the charge of conducting and maintaining a game which was first made be modified, and now we ask that Boyle be fined the same as Johnson."

Judge Monsarrat told O'Brien that his client would either have to accept a $250 fine or the court would listen to evidence, as the prosecution had suggested, so the degree of the offense could be determined.

"Under the law relating to gambling I can fine this defendant anything from one cent to $1000," Judge Monsarrat said, "and in fixing a fine I must know the degree. I have been severely criticized by the newspapers for fixing the penalty too low in the other cases, and I do not feel disposed to make it less in this."

"Your honor is here to dispense justice and should not pay any attention," said O'Brien heatedly.

"I do not," answered the judge, "any further than any court should."

Public Opinion Makes Law.
"It is perfectly right for any court to pay no attention to public opinion, for it is public opinion which in the first place makes the law."

FINE CAST FOR 'FINE FEATHERS'

Another world film corporation star comes to the Hawaii theater tonight in one of the successful stage offerings of the last few years. Janet Beecher is the star, and "Fine Feathers" is the play, which was one of the premier offerings of that noted playwright, Eugene Walter. The role of Jane Reynolds (Miss Beecher) is filled with dramatic possibilities, and is termed in the profession "actor proof."

In the silent version of this tense emotional drama there has been considerable elaboration on the stage offering; incidents merely given passing mention on the stage are strongly emphasized in the film and greatly strengthen the story and the possibilities for the members of the cast.

The story told in "Fine Feathers," is as old as time itself, being of a woman's dissatisfaction with her station in life, her desire for the same attire as that of her more wealthy sisters, and her husband's efforts to satisfy this desire. The "Fine Feathers" are procured but at cost of the man's honor and untold agony to the wife, as a result of the means she adopts for the satisfaction of vanity.

A strong cast is gathered around Miss Beecher in this offering and the camera man has taken especial care in his branch of the work with the result that the production is one of the best of the World Film repertoire.

LONG-DELAYED PAPERS IN M'GRATH DIVORCE CASE FILED AT LAST

Summons in the divorce suit brought by Caroline Elizabeth McGrath against John Joseph McGrath, fugitive from justice, was returned to circuit court yesterday, the papers being presented by Leon M. Straus, attorney for Mrs. McGrath. The document shows that service was made on McGrath in San Francisco on October 4 last, and a statement sworn to before a San Francisco notary, is signed by McGrath to this effect. The notary in the case is J. J. Kerrigan. In connection with the summons was a statement signed by H. I. Mulerey, city and county clerk of San Francisco, to the effect that Kerrigan is a commissioned notary. The summons arrived in Honolulu on October 26 last, and are alleged to have been in Attorney Straus' possession since that time, although he stated on several occasions that he did not know where the papers were, and that he did not have them. The signature on the summons appears to be the same as the one which McGrath affixed to a bond in one of the robbery cases with which he was connected.

seems to be a nervous excitement. There is not an English soldier along the front, according to the corporal, but believes that victory is certain. "It's victory and nothing else for those fellows out on the firing line," he says. "They'll tell you that Britain and her allies are sure to win."

"England has the real fighters after all, too," smiles Corporal Wall. "Of course, Germany has her gas, and her fire, and all those things that are not the real fighting stuff, but England has the men and the nerve. Don't they show it, too, when the thickest of the fight comes on?"

Corporal Wall's regiment fought in trenches that were on the average about 80 yards from the Germans. He says he has heard of the soldiers bantering with each other between the lines but that he never knew of it where he was stationed. He fought for a while at one trench that was but 30 yards from the German line. Sanitary conditions are perfect, he says, and he has nothing but the highest praise for the efficient work of the Red Cross.
